

PHOTOGBA

Far left: A bird's-eye view of the Ouzhuang Interchange in Yuexi district reveals a stunning floral display, with colorful bougainvillea bushes perfectly outlining the overpass.
PHOTOS BY PARKER ZHENG / CHINA DAILY

Above and below left: Bougainvillea blooms in full glory around the roadside at Chigang Interchange in Haizhu district. A closer look reveals their unique charm: bright, flower-like, geometric leaves that surround tiny white flowers.

Spring greetings in full bloom

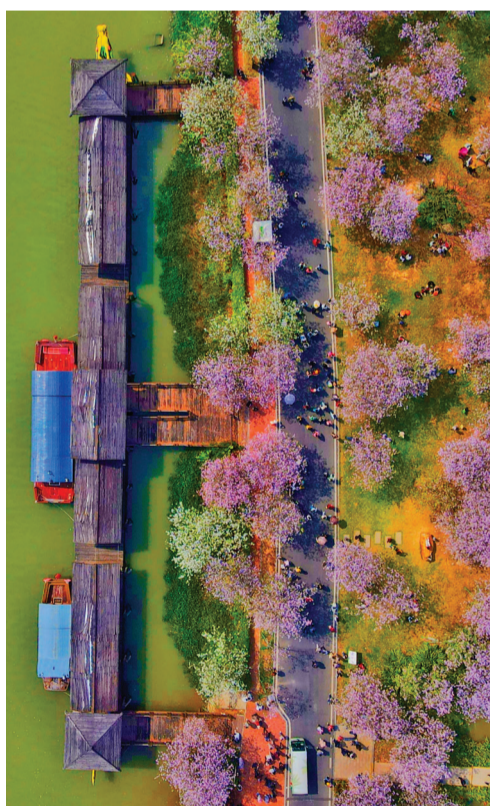

Above: The iconic red kapok trees are in bloom at the Site of the Peasant Movement Training Institute in Yuexi district. Known as the "hero flower" locally, kapok blossoms symbolize courage and resilience, lending depth to Guangzhou's status as a "hero city" with its profound significance in modern Chinese history.

Springtime in Guangzhou, Guangdong province, is a celebration of color and life, earning the city its reputation as China's perennial "city of blossoms". Residents and tourists marvel at the vibrant azaleas and kapok blossoms — the city's official flower — lining the boulevards, alongside various other species in bloom.

This annual floral exuberance highlights both Guangzhou's natural beauty and its commitment to environmental harmony and sustainable development. As one of the first cities in China to welcome spring, the southern metropolis invites residents and visitors to appreciate its sea of blossoms and find peace of mind.

Above: A sea of bougainvillea creates the perfect natural backdrop for photos at the South China Agricultural University in Tianhe district. Left: Bauhinia trees are in full bloom at Haizhu National Wetland Park, casting vibrant shades across the serene landscape.

Above right: Floor-to-ceiling windows at the Yuexi International Congress Center provide a natural frame for views of full-bloom flowers.

Below right: Visitors stroll by the lake under the lush bauhinia blossoms at Haizhu National Wetland Park.

Far right: Bougainvillea transforms the concrete infrastructure of the Ouzhuang Interchange into a stunning floral urban design.

